form on which he was to stand as a binding assurance to the country of his devotion to the principle of a single Presidential term.

For this reason the pledge to which Mr. Wilson subscribed when he accepted the Democratic nomination and sought election on the Democratic platform differs materially from the pledges made by other Presidents not to run for reelection. Mr. Cleveland, for instance, intimated in a state paper, written in the course of his first administration, that he would not be a candidate for another term. Colonel Roosevelt announced on election night in 1904 that he would not seek renomination. But these were mere expressions of personal opinion and intention. They were not made before an election, for the purpose of influencing votes. They did not conconstitute a preëlection contract such as Mr. Wilson made with the voters who supported him in 1912.

The makers of the Democratic platform of 1912 did not simply commit the party in a general way to the single term policy. It did not serve. Constitution making a President ineligible for reëlection. It went much further than that. It expressly pledged the candidate of the convention of 1912 to an acceptance of the single-term principle. Here is the one-term plank of the Baltimore platform:

"We favor a single Presidential term, and to that end urge the adoption of an amendment making the President of the United States ineligible for reelection, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle."

Whirlwind Finish Asked to Swing State Into Hughes Line

By S. H. EVANS.

Cleveland, Oct. 26 .- It is unexampled prosperity rather than peace which gives the Republicans of Ohio cause to worry. Boiled down, that is about all

It will be indeed remarkable if Wilson carries Ohio, for on the basis of past performances he starts more than 100,000 votes behind. Republicans Fighting Hard

The Republicans all through the northern part of Ohio are very decidedly in the dumps. They appear to be so deep in the slough of despond that, in the view of an outside observer at least, it will take dynamite to get them out. Raymond Robins here in Cleveland the other afternoon exploded some of the kind of dynamite so badly needed. Old Progressives and "old guard" Republicans, not to speak of quite a few Democrata, said that was the kind of campaigning which would yet win Ohio. But they don't want any more of Fairbanks. If Roosevelt can devote a little time to the state that would do a lot of good. The people here seem to be in a peculiar mood. It is a radical, progressive and keenly discriminating state.

Active Republicans, speaking only of Northern Ohio, are very much disappointed in the campaign management.

They say Mr. Hatfield, the state chairman, is an amateur and that he has not been backed up properly by the national committee. The various county organizations were chilled in some places at the start of the campaign by the organization of branches of the Hughes Alliance. That is especially true here in Cleveland. The Cuyahoga County organization acts as if it were embarrassed. embarrassed.

There are three separate battles going on in the state, and the victory in one does not appear to depend on how the tide sets in the other two. There is the battle to carry the state for Hughes, the result of which is so much in doubt that it is probably accurate to say that at this moment it inclines toward Wilson. There is the campaign to elect Governor Frank B. Willis over former Governor Cox, which is hanging in the balance, but rather inclined toward Willis. Finally there is the Herrick-Pomerene battle for the United States Senatorship.

The Democratic campaign has had the advantage of a much heavier newspaper support than the Republican campaign has had. Not that the Republican n plurality for unty was 4,500; has had. Not that the Republican newspapers are not loyal and effective, but the newspapers supporting Wilson are of wider influence, because of greater circulation. This means much in a state like this, which even in last four years has increased largely dragged "which" four times into the foregoing partial sentence. He was not as fluent in his patriotism as Woodrow Wilson, and neither was he eloquently reversible.
